Spring is in the air and so is Major League Baseball! With that, we've started seeing a few new baseball bottles being released from both AB-InBev and SAB-Miller. It appears that Miller Lite has changed the design on their bottles, which is a welcome sight, but it is too early to see what AB-InBev will do this year. Let's keep our fingers crossed that they change things up as well.

AB-InBev seems to continue to put out some commemorative bottles here and there. With the release of the new NFL Draft bottle and the new UFC bottle (released in Canada), we get two great additions for our shelves. In addition, who knew that there were two variations to the 2011 Budweiser St Patty's Day bottle? It goes without saying that you have to have a keen eye to notice the variations of any bottle. Kudos goes out to Ken Kieliszewski ABC# 109, who brought this variation to our attention.

If you keep an eye out for new bottles on eBay, you probably saw that an older Budweiser bottle #500314 sold for $118.50 recently. This was one of the last black over red designs that AB put out, and just so happened to be a 3.2% variation. That just goes to show the rarity of some of the older variations, especially in the 3.2% category. However, like anything collectible, it is only worth what someone wants to pay for it.

In international news, we have started to see some very scarce bottles produced in some very small markets. This is good for us collectors of foreign bottles; however, you hardly ever hear about them unless they show up on eBay, and when they do, they usually command a premium price tag. That being said, I would like to thank our members from both Canada and Australia for offering up new releases to the rest of us for very reasonable prices. It is good to have friends in distant lands. The new Carlton Dry bottle out of Australia is a sure contender for next year's International Can Of the Year category.

As promised, we have two more collector's stories as well as some neat photos of their collections. Jim Friesen, from Saint Paul, MN, ABC #093, and Mick Warner, from Sydney, Australia, ABC #155. Both have some fantastic bottles in their collections as you will see, and they both love to trade as well. Thanks gentlemen for your additions to our newsletter.

Until next time, keep an eye out for any new bottles, as well as any variations. By doing so, you will help our hobby grow, and that is what it is all about. Enjoy the Newsletter!

New ABC Chapter Newsletter Editor Needed Soon

Yes, it's true. I will be stepping down as the ABC Chapter Newsletter Editor after the next edition (Aug-Oct). After four years and 15 editions I have decided to move on to other things and have to 'clear the slate' of a few things I'm always pre-occupied with.

If you would be interested in taking on the task please contact me or any chapter officer.

The Newsletter Editor job is also an officer position so the new editor will be voted in and announced at the annual CANvention meeting in Covington, KY.

Jack Daniel's Introduces Tennessee Whiskey-Based Ready-to-Drink Beverages in the United States

Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey announces the release of its new Tennessee Whiskey-based ready-to-drink beverages in the United States. Scheduled to hit shelves in March in most U.S. markets, the perfectly mixed beverages offer consumers a convenient way to enjoy the legendary Jack Daniel's Old No. 7 with some of America's favorite mixers.

The Tennessee Whiskey-based beverages will contain 5% abv and be available in both Jack & Cola and Jack & Ginger flavors in early March, with Jack & Diet Cola arriving in late March. All varieties are available in four-packs of 12-ounce recyclable aluminum bottles with four-packs of 12-ounce recyclable cans available in select states. The suggested retail price for the four-pack is $9.99.

The Jack Daniel's offerings will be the first ready-to-drink beverages in an aluminum bottle. The single-serving packaging features the iconic Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey label at the center of a sleek, black aluminum bottle, perfect for keeping the smooth whiskey pairings chilled.

"With the launch of Tennessee Whiskey-based ready-to-drink beverages in the United States, we look forward to providing our customers with a refreshing, convenient way to enjoy their favorite Jack Daniel's mixed drinks on more occasions," said Joseph Carvajal, U.S. Marketing Manager for Jack Daniel's Family of Brands. The distinct, flavorful taste of Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey is crafted using a unique charcoal mellowing process during which whiskey slowly passes, drop by drop, through hard maple charcoal and matured in new handcrafted, white oak barrels. The whiskey is then added to popular mixers for a convenient way to enjoy some of America's favorite Jack Daniel's drinks.

About Jack Daniel's: Officially registered by the U.S. Government in 1866, the Jack Daniel Distillery, Lem Motlow, proprietor, is the oldest registered distillery in the United States and is on the National Register of Historic Places. Based in Lynchburg, Tenn., the Jack Daniel Distillery is the maker of the world-famous Jack Daniel's Old No. 7 Tennessee Whiskey, Gentleman Jack Rare Tennessee Whiskey, Jack Daniel's Single Barrel Tennessee Whiskey and Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey-based ready-to-drink beverages.

New U.S. Bottle Editor Tom Fay ABC# 092

Hey all, Tom Fay ABC# 092 here. Brad has asked me, as the new US Bottles & Miller Brewing editor, to share a few lines.

Here goes, I am happy to help the ABC Chapter in any way that I can, but I need YOUR help also. I sit in the middle of Anheuser Busch Country just 25 mile north of St. Louis, to get a NEW Miller Bottle or US Bottle release here is almost impossible and I need your help in sending me info about a new release. Information such as what part of the country are they being found in, what packaging concept (9, 12, 15, 18, or 24 bottles to a package) and what is the resale price? If possible please send me the pics that you may have of the new release. I'll send them on to Brad after cataloging the necessary info that we need. AND LAST BUT NOT LEAST.....I need for you to get a hold of your fellow chapter members and get them to use the website. It seems that there is a core group of about 12 members that religiously use the site. I was in a region recently where we have 5 members and they didn't realize the potential that the site has because they had never signed in.

Our website has been the best thing that could have happened to our chapter and I truly thank BRAD for all of the hard work and time that he has put into it, but really it's not being utilized like it should. E-mail or call or talk to your fellow chapter members and let them know what's available, especially when they ask you the next time if you've seen any pictures of the new bottles or when they ask.....anything new out there ??

My Collection

Mick Warner ABC# 155

I've been collecting for about 14 years now and have amassed some 12000 cans and bottles. Mainly Australia, New Zealand, Pacific Islands and United States. From the states I collect 16 and 24oz sports cans, 12oz steel and now bottles. All are housed in an area 30x12 foot but extensions are already under way to double my capacity. It's a never ending job building new shelves. A lot of us Aussies put shelving on doors to stop sunlight getting to the cans. It also doubles your space and when people visit to view the cans its a simple task to just open and close the doors.

I enjoy trading with fellow collectors in America. I have been over a couple of times and one day will make CANvention. So far my visits have all been at the wrong time of year. Cheers to all fellow members!

One Can (Bottle), One Country

Jim Friesen ABC# 093

As many of you know, I have been an OCOC collector for many years. I had no plans to collect the aluminum bottles when they first came out, then, one of my overseas friends sent me a couple of alum bottles, and I really loved them. That was the beginning of my one alum bottle/one country collection! Now, I try hard to pick up any new countries that come out on the market. Heineken is one brewer that makes the bottles and exports them to many different countries, and I put these into the collection (if the country is indicated on the bottle) until hopefully, I get one that actually is made in that country.

Some of the bottles are much harder than others, just like USA bottles. Currently, I have bottles representing 40 different countries, and another is on the way. There is also a range in size and shape in the foreign bottles. The smallest is Kubuli from Dominica (250ml), and the largest size is 500ml from several places. The other sizes are 330ml, 350ml, 355ml, 472ml and 473ml, with the 330ml size being the most common.

I am showing one bottle from each of the countries, even though I have a few others in my collection. I enjoy collecting the alum bottles very much, and it has brought me a new enthusiasm and enjoyment in the past few years. I guess there still are new tricks for old dogs!

What's New

Jerome Spindler ABC# 006

Hi everyone, I hope you're all surviving the high gas prices and hope you don't drive any farther than you have to. There are a few new bottles out there from Miller Lite. The first one is a new version of the Chi-rish bottle (838725). A much improved design from last year.

The first of the new baseball season from Miller Lite is the Milwaukee Brewers (839101). This year it looks as if Miller has changed their generic picture from a batter to a fielder for all the baseball bottles. Also be sure to notice how some of the bottles will have footage up near the top. Not sure if that is to designate the actual footage of the home field or if it will also be generic. Wondering already though as several bottles do have different numbers, hmm...

The next bottles to arrive were the two Chicago baseball teams. Wrigleyville (839104) which this year has the generic picture instead of the brick wall. The White Sox (839103) came out at the same time.

Finally for baseball, so far, is the Cleveland Indians (839102), again with the generic design.

Jack Daniel's has also jumped on the aluminum bottle bandwagon (see story, page 2). They had released several 16 oz test market bottles, which seem to have gone by the wayside so they followed with three 12 oz bottles. Whiskey and cola, diet cola and ginger aluminum bottles (photos on website) have been released and seem to be popping up everywhere. Be on the lookout for more from JD as different markets will surely cause them to produce several variations of these bottles.

Foreign Bottles

Juan Carlos De Marco ABC# 031

Again I'm pleased to convey news about cabottles that have appeared in the world, and in many cases stand out with their aesthetic beauty. Despite the international crisis, breweries continue to opt to renew this proposal and get the new issues for consumer sale, in their bottles and containers in general. For this occasion we have a new set of beauties from different countries.

OPA - Brazil: Let me begin with the first experience of Brazil cabottles. Curiously, there is not an industrial brewery, but a home brewer that has decided to jump into the market despite aluminum costs, (in South America they are very high). OPA is simple but striking design. The model we're seeing is a test which was performed with the debut. We are waiting from one moment to another appearance in supermarkets and bars.

BOFFERDING - Luxembourg: The Luxembourg beer market is highly competitive, which is why after the two Simon Regal models that we already know, appeared, the firm Bofferding not to be outdone, or remain in the rear, throwing a gem, with its traditional colors that identify the brand. Do not be surprised if now competitors like Mousel Diekirch, Battin or Clausel follow the path with some other ones.

CARLTON - Australia: Another of the traditional global brands "fell" to the wonderful influence of aluminum bottles. "Carlton Dry", with touches of stylistic sobriety. They will probably attend the Kentucky CANvention in the hands of the "Aussie" delegation, who always surprise us with their personalized gifts to the ABC members.

PREMIUM FUSION - Czech Republic: If we were waiting for an artistic touch was reflected in a cabottle, this is it ...Simple, effective and modern, to make clear that not only the Spanish are the most creative. Welcome to the Czech beer.

KIRIN - Japan: The Japanese never tire of creating and creating. This is the turn of the world's most popular sport: Soccer, as a collection: A set consisting of 11 players from the Japanese national team, and the shield of their association. 12 Cabottles in unique limited edition to make collectors lose their sleep.

SAPPORO - Japan: The traditional format of Sapporo again presenting the "Bräu", with some German condiment. Very pretty as its predecessors.

MAISON VAN DER BOER - Holland: Heinieken is not the only public face of Holland ... Look at this set of three 330 cc. sober, distinguished as a party dress.

DORADA - Spain: Canary Island Brewing Company, launches a limited edition aluminum release of 250,000 bottles of lager with motifs of the Tenerife Carnival, representing:

- 1.- "Charlot" includes the figure of the mythical character along with retro motifs that takes the consumer to the 70.
- 2.- "Carnaval", the emphasis in the celebration of Carnival itself and gives an overview of the different characters come together in it.
- 3.- "Yellow Submarine", emphasizes traditional Golden label which will feature different artwork on carnival grounds.

CAUTION! FAKE CABOTTLES ALSO IN THE WORKS!!

Who would not want a Palestinian Taybeh? Well, I think many, although in this case after we had a consultation with the factory we confirmed they never produced beer in bottles of this type ... Watch out !!! Anyway they are around and perhaps it would make a nice 'novelty' bottle, but it will still be fake...

Be sure to check-out the many foreign variations over at the ABC Website. Your help with any new variations is always welcome. Drop me an email and we will do our best to keep the listings up-to-date.

What's New in A-B?!

Brad Ambruso ABC# 007

A-B started off earlier this year with the usual 'St Pats' Day bottles. The Budweiser is a total flip from last years white bottle with Shamrocks. A variation was also discovered with an addition shamrock above the neck bowtie. The Bud Light is exactly the same as last year except a 3.2 variation was released this year. 501595 (not pictured) is identical to the 501594 except for the 3.2 back panel.

Since A-B will be the exclusive NFL sponsor from now on we should start to see several more bottles in addition to the NFL Draft bottle released in March.

Bud Light up in Canada went and made themselves the official UFC sponsor. So now we have that bottle to track down. Pretty much a standard bottle with UFC across the bottom and the usual French writing we see on our northern neighbors bottles.

Budweiser has two baseball bottles out so far. The first is for the Anaheim Angels 50th anniversary, 1961-2011. Bottle has a real similar design to all the bottles we've seen in 2009 and 2010. The next is a second bottle for the Giants World Series victory. The bottle is a major change from the 500450 bottle released last fall. It has a noticeably different front panel with the Golden Gate bridge and logo.

Budweiser 'St Pats' Day

Not a bad start to 2011 for A-B. Would have thought more baseball bottles would be released by now and we would have an idea of what to expect for football, but as usual, nothing concrete.

There were a few designs floating around for several Tilt aluminum bottles. Nothing has happened with that yet and instead of starting more unfounded rumors, we'll see if they "Really" happen to get released.....

Aluminum bottles are the only thing I collect and because of the membership of the ABC I have been afforded the opportunity to meet and make many, many new friends all over the world. The ABC Chapter has so many wonderful people involved and we can really continue to grow our family with a little more effort and use of the website.

Thanks for allowing me the time to ramble and I look forward to working with all of you in the future !!
